OVER the past few years some 4 000 Bantu school children annually visited the Museum in organized groups. These groups were allowed into the Museum free of charge and were conducted only by their own teachers. During November 1975 we suggested to the Department of Bantu Education that they appoint a qualified person to the Museum to act as guide-lecturer to such groups. There was immediate response to this suggestion. A new post was created and during January Mr. Edwin Mohatlane (left) was appointed and assumed service.

After an initial training period he now handles two school groups per day with a total of about 1 200 school children per month. Groups now visit the Museum on an organised basis where they are formally lectured to and conducted through the Museum by the guide-lecturer. We are sincerely grateful towards the Department of Bantu Education for their very positive attitude which greatly facilitated the rendering of this important service.
